

Portail Mauritanien du Développement

Actualités Agriculture Santé Economie Education Pêche Pauvreté Tourisme NTIC

Actualités du Global Development Gateway - Les TICS et le Développement

- Workshop on Establishing Public Private Partnerships for ICT Initiatives
- Africa: Why affordable international bandwidth matters?
- Fibre for Africa: Opening up Affordable Bandwidth in Africa
- Africover Mapping Tools and Software Family
- The Great Brazilian IP-Train Robbery

Copyright © 2005 Portail Mauritanien du Développement. Tous droits réservés.
470, Avenue du Palais des Congrès BP

<http://topics.developmentgateway.org/ict/rc/ItemDetail.do~1094333?intcmp=3007>

English | Español | Français

dgCommunities AiDA dgMarket Country Resources
Home > dgCommunities > Information and Communica... > Content > The Great Brazilian IP-Tr...

The Great Brazilian IP-Train Robbery

This article published by the Institute for Trade, Standards and Sustainable Development (ITSSD) focuses on Brazil's pursuit of Global IP Law Reforms that will weaken US Private Property Rights. From the introduction: "Princeton, NJ – March 19, 2007 – In a new University of Miami Inter-American Law Review article entitled, Brazil's IP Opportunism Threatens US Private Property Rights, trade and regulatory expert Lawrence Kogan tracks how Brazil is navigating internationally to 'railroad' the great American engine of intellectual property-based innovation and economic growth." PDF Document.