

English
Español
Français

The Great Brazilian IP-Train Robbery

Submitted by Via RSS on Tue, 2007-03-20 09:28.

full article · source · login or register to post comments »

English | Español | Français

dgCommunities AiDA dgMarket Country Resources

Home > dgCommunities > Information and Communica... > Content > The Great Brazilian IP-Tr...

The Great Brazilian IP-Train Robbery

This article published by the Institute for Trade, Standards and Sustainable Development (ITSSD) focuses on Brazil's pursuit of Global IP Law Reforms that will weaken US Private Property Rights. From the introduction: "Princeton, NJ – March 19, 2007 – In a new University of Miami Inter-American Law Review article entitled, Brazil's IP Opportunism Threatens US Private Property Rights, trade and regulatory expert Lawrence Kogan tracks how Brazil is navigating internationally to 'railroad' the great American engine of intellectual property-based innovation and economic growth." PDF Document.

http://community.telecentre.org/en-tc/about_us telecentre.org is housed at IDRC in Ottawa, Canada, and Delhi, India. We facilitate the telecentre.org initiative, review and track investments, and conduct research and outreach.

telecentre.org is a collaborative initiative that supports and strengthens the telecentre movement. We believe that information and communication technology, used locally, can empower individuals and communities. Our vision is to build a knowledge society from the ground up.

telecentre.org is both a social investment program and a global community: